

Tencent set to take stake in Universal Music

August 6 2019

Billie Eilish is one of Universal's more recent smash hits

Chinese internet giant Tencent is in early talks to take a stake in the Universal Music Group, a behemoth in the global music industry, UMG's French owner said on Tuesday.

If a deal is confirmed, Shenzhen-based Tencent is to take 10 percent in Universal Music, with an option to pick up another 10 percent.

This would translate into an investment by Tencent of up to six billion euros ($6.7 billion), the Vivendi conglomerate said in a statement.

At the same time, Tencent and Vivendi have started talking about "strategic commercial cooperation" in the music business, the French company said.

"Vivendi is keen to explore enhanced cooperation which could help UMG capture growth opportunities offered by the digitalization and the opening of new markets," it said.

Vivendi said UMG—which lays claim to "the greatest catalogue of recordings and songs ever"—also plans to sell additional minority stakes to other potential partners.

UMG competes with Sony and Warner Music for leadership in the music industry, with a vast catalogue of artists including The Rolling Stones, Elton John, Abba, Queen and Chinese pianist Lang Lang.

Tencent posted a net profit of 27.2 billion yuan ($4 billion) in the three months to March 31 on revenues of 85.5 billion yuan.

Vivendi shares rose more than six percent in early trading Tuesday on the Paris stock exchange in reaction to the announcement.

© 2019 AFP

Citation: Tencent set to take stake in Universal Music (2019, August 6) retrieved 10 April 2024 from <https://techxplore.com/news/2019-08-tencent-stake-universal-music.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.