

Amazon extends remote work option to mid-2021 for some employees

October 21 2020

Amazon is extending its remote work policy for some employees until mid-2021 as part of its response to the coronavirus pandemic

Amazon said Wednesday it would extend the option of working from home for many of its employees until mid-2021 as part of its response to the Covid-19 pandemic.

"The health and safety of our employees is our top priority, and it will be some time before things return to normal," the US technology and retail giant said in a blog post.

"Accordingly, work that can effectively be done from home can continue to be done from home through June 30, 2021."

It was not immediately clear how many of Amazon's employees would be eligible for remote work.

The Seattle-based titan had nearly 900,000 employees worldwide earlier this year, and was expected to hire more than 100,000 seasonal workers. But many work in warehouses and retail stores or handle deliveries, and thus would not be able to work remotely.

Rival tech firms Google and Facebook are not expecting workers to return to their campuses until the middle of next year at the earliest. Others like Twitter and Slack have said employees may work remotely indefinitely.

© 2020 AFP

Citation: Amazon extends remote work option to mid-2021 for some employees (2020, October 21) retrieved 10 April 2024 from <https://techxplore.com/news/2020-10-amazon-remote-option-mid-employees.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.
