Microsoft will reveal later this month what PC users can expect from the future of its Windows operating system.

The company sent out invites Wednesday to a Microsoft event touting

"what's next" for Windows. A live stream of the event takes place on June 24 at 1 p.m. ET.

During last month's Microsoft Build developers conference, Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella teased the future of the platform during his keynote address, noting he has been self-hosting it for the last several months and is "incredibly excited" about its prospects.

"Soon we will share one of the most significant updates to Windows of the past decade to unlock greater economic opportunity for developers and creators," said Nadella.
