

United Airlines is tweaking its app to give customers rebooking options and vouchers during delays

June 22 2023

A United Airlines jetliner is pulled out of a gate at Denver International Airport Friday, May 26, 2023, in Denver. Credit: AP Photo/David Zalubowski

United Airlines says when flights are delayed or canceled it will use its app to send customers options for rebooking and, in some cases, vouchers for meals and hotel rooms.

United said Thursday that it began testing the service on its app late last year and found that it reduced the number of people waiting in airports lines to speak to airline agents.

Airlines are under pressure from the Biden administration to improve customer service. The Transportation Department said recently it would begin writing new rules to require passenger compensation when the airline causes delays and cancelations.

United's chief customer officer, Linda Jojo, said the new app features would save time and reduce stress for travelers because "we know things don't always go as planned."

So far this year, United has canceled about 5,400 flights, or 1.3% of its schedule, which matches the industrywide average, according to figures from FlightAware.com. Nearly 100,000 other United flights this year have arrived at least 15 minutes late.

© 2023 The Associated Press. All rights reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten or redistributed without permission.

Citation: United Airlines is tweaking its app to give customers rebooking options and vouchers during delays (2023, June 22) retrieved 27 February 2024 from <https://techxplore.com/news/2023-06-airlines-tweaking-app-customers-rebooking.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.