

French homeschooling system hit by hackers from Russia, China: investigators

12 April 2021

But investigators confirmed that hackers had targeted the system.

President Emmanuel Macron shut the country's schools for three weeks to help tame a third wave of Covid-19 infections, after hospitals warned they were being swamped with critical cases.

After one week of homeschooling, schools were closed for two weeks' holidays.

© 2021 AFP

Credit: CC0 Public Domain

Hackers operating from Russia and China targeted France's homeschooling platform which crashed at the start of a nationwide lockdown last week, investigators said Monday.

The cyber attacks on the "Ma classe a la maison" (My class at home) programme originated in Russia and China but it was unclear whether the perpetrators were themselves Russian and Chinese, the sources added.

The platform, which was used by more than a million pupils and teachers to continue classes after schools were shut to halt the spread of Covid-19, repeatedly crashed on April 6.

France's distance learning centre CNED, which runs the service, complained of "deliberate malevolent acts" taking place over several days.

Education Minister Jean-Michel Blanquer drew widespread ridicule for suggesting that foreign hackers caused the disruptions, with many parents instead blaming a lack of preparation by the government.

APA citation: French homeschooling system hit by hackers from Russia, China: investigators (2021, April 12) retrieved 3 December 2021 from <https://techxplore.com/news/2021-04-french-homeschooling-hackers-russia-china.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.