

WeWork reports smaller loss, shares rise

15 November 2021

management after the exit of co-founder Adam Neumann.

Shares rose 2.4 percent to $9.40 in midday trading.

© 2021 AFP

Shares of WeWork rose as the company reported a smaller quarterly loss.

Office-sharing company WeWork reported a smaller quarterly loss Monday and pointed to another gradual rise in occupancy levels, lifting shares.

WeWork, reporting earnings for the first time as a public company, said the third quarter "saw a continuation of the strong momentum seen in the second quarter of 2021" as more people return to office life and the worst of the pandemic recedes.

Total occupancy rose to 56 percent in the third quarter from 50 percent in the prior period after bottoming out at 45 percent late last year.

The trends have continued into October, with occupancy hitting 59 percent, the company said.

The company reported a loss of $802 million, compared with a loss of $941 million in the year-ago period. Revenues fell 18 percent to $661 million.

WeWork debuted on the Nasdaq last month following a merger with special-purpose acquisition company called BowX. The company has new

APA citation: WeWork reports smaller loss, shares rise (2021, November 15) retrieved 19 August 2022 from <https://techxplore.com/news/2021-11-wework-smaller-loss.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.